Mr. William M. Mann.
(President of Washington Zoo Garden).

Feb. 5th 1937

Shimizu. Feb. 5th 1937

Honorable president of Washington zoological
Garden,

Please excuse my rudeness as to venture writing such a letter to you. I am a Japanese boy aged 19, very weak and wretchedly poor. Therefore I received no such high education, not ever got I such a good position. And all because of those that I mentioned here over I could hardly ever enjoy life but to exchange letters with unknown foreign people. Sometimes I unwillingly demean myself. Sometimes I am driven into a transport which makes me curse the world, knowing well that it is my fault and not the world's.

And after all I am obliged to persuade myself to give up every hope. Honorable president! It was not the subject what I should write. Please forgive me to have professed such wayward, absurd story.

Now, I have read in today's newspaper that you are going to Malay Archipelago to explore and catch wild animals. Hence I beseech you, please take me with you, and I will do my best to help you do the heavy task, though, since I am not very strong, I may not be of much use. But please take me as I do my utmost. It is because I am weak that I ask for your favour. Why, I haven't got anything to do. I only want to go abroad, but not dreaming it something pleasant. For years I have been thinking of going abroad to work there with might and main, but could not attain till today.

But I know that proverb tells that "where there is a will (a firm will), there is a way." So I believe THIS TIME will give me a chance to go.

Could you please take me with you. I am sure my parents will grant me to go. Could you teach me the formalities to go please! If you could not in any way, please give a word of encouragement by the post card I enclosed here in this letter. Hastly I beg your pardon to have troubled you to read such an impolite writing.

Wishing your great success in Malay, I remain

Yours sincerely,

Poor, weak Japanese boy

Ryoichi Saito.

A Short History of Daibutsu

Daibutsu, the principal image, is called Vairochana Buddha, which symbolizes Buddha's blessings, omnipotent and omnipresent. He is sitting on an open lotus blossom in an attitude of calm reflection; the Largest image of its kind in Japan, perhaps one of the greatest in the world. It was erected in 749 A. D. at the instance of the (45th) Emperor Shomu and contains 437 tons of bronze, 238 pounds of gold, 7 tons of vegetable wax, 165 pounds of mercury, and several thousand tons of charcoal. The gold and mercury are used solely for gilding.

Two years were required to cast the image; the Emperor himself carried earth with his own hands to help make the foundation, and after seven unsuccessful attempts, the image was at last completed. The head and neck were cast in a single mould, but the body and the lotus stand were formed of separate plates soldered together and gilded all over; though most of the gilt has disappeared. On the lotus petals innumerable words with their own Buddhas are engraved.

The temple, built the following year to shelter it, was burned down in the 12th century during a civil war, leaving Daibutsu so seriously broken in the ashes that the head had to be replaced the following year by Imperial order by a new one, which is much darker than the body. The recreation of the temple was commenced in 1190 and finished the next year.

In 1567, more than 370 years after the rebuilding, the temple was again destroyed by fire, and Daibutsu then stood without shelter for over a hundred years. The reconstruction of the temple was begun about 1699, and three years were taken for its completion.

This third structure is the present temple. It is reduced to 66 per cent of the old building, 160 ft. high with a frontage of 188 ft., and a depth of 166 ft., and holds the distinction of being the largest wooden structure, in the world.

From that time, about 200 years passed to the time of the Meiji era, and the temple came almost to a state of ruin. Repair work, therefore, was started in the 37th year of Meiji (1903) and completed in the 2nd year of Taisho (1913) without the slightest alteration of style.

A Brief History of the Kamakura Dai-butsu

IN the year 737, A.D., the Emperor SHOMU, being a sincere devotee to Buddhism, caused numerous monasteries to be erected throughout Japan, and, among the other churches thus built and endowed by His Majesty, is that known as the "Kotoku-in" at Kamakura.

In the grounds of this ancient fane stands the famous colossal bronze image of the Great Buddha which was cast in September 1252, A.D., by the celebrated glyptic artist ONO-GOROE-MON in accordance with commands received from the SHOGUN (Prince MUNETAKA) who assisted IDANO-NO-TSUBONE to carry out her pious desire of fulfilling the dying injunctions of MINAMOTO-NO-YORITOMO, one of whose waiting ladies she had been. The image was much injured by a tidal wave which swept over the site of the monastery in 1495, A.D., yet, notwithstanding the ravages of time, and the fury of the elements, it is in a state of excellent preservation and repair.

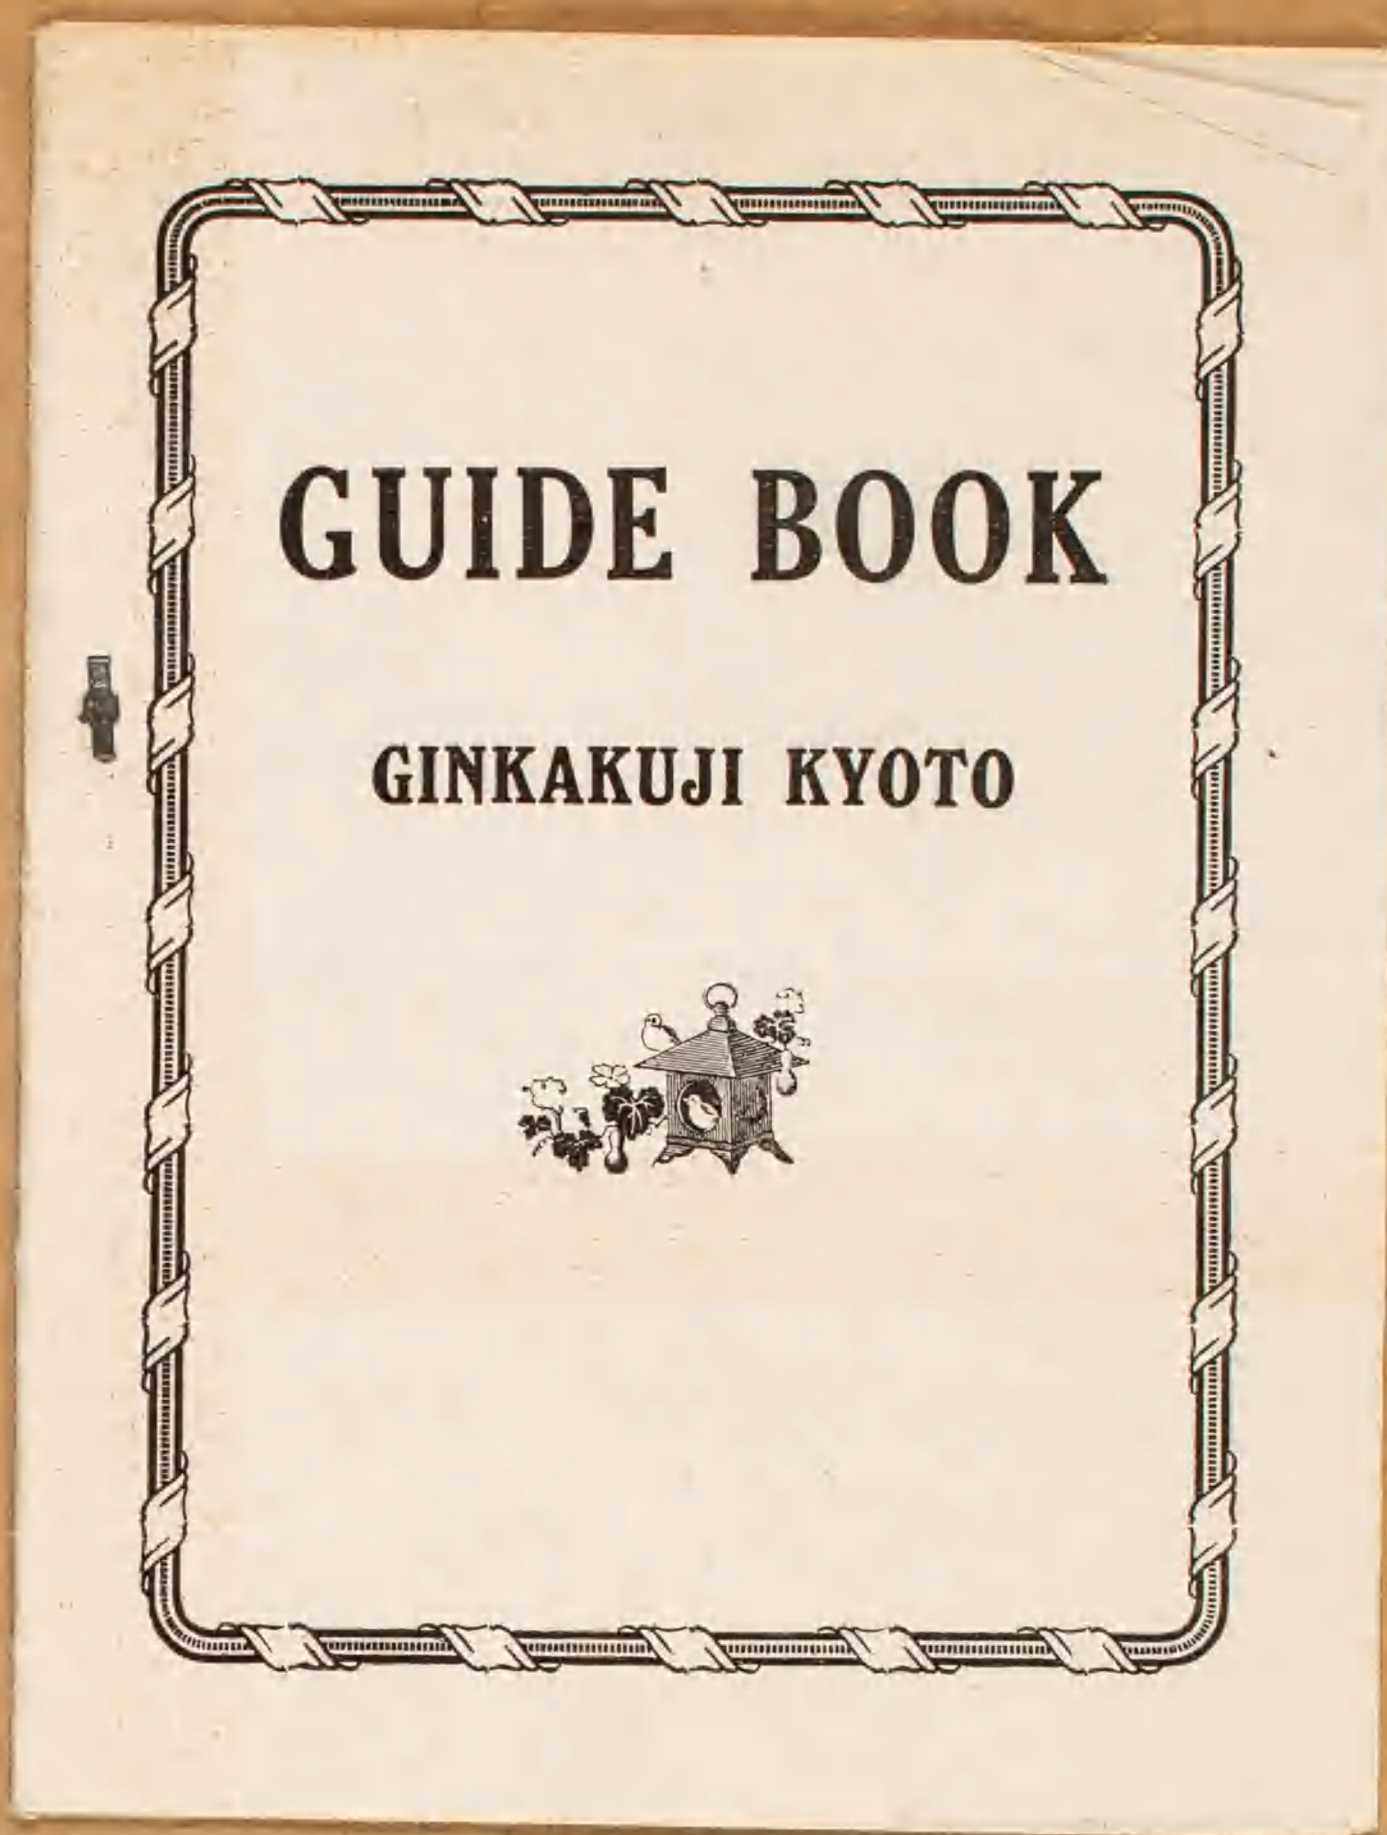

It is 12.89m. in height; 29.29m. in circumference; the length of the face is 2.33m., of the eye 1m., of the ear 2.01m., and of the nose 85cm. The breadth of the mouth is 84cm., the length from knee to knee 9.09m., and the circumference of the thumb is 84cm.

Short Sketch
of
The TEMPLE:
BUILDINGS AND THE GARDEN.

GINKAKUJI,
KYOTO, JAPAN.

Ginkaku or the Silver Pavilion and Kogetsudai or the Mound Facing the Moon.

SHORT SKETCH OF THE TEMPLE: BUILDINGS AND THE GARDEN.

GINKAKUJI, or properly Jishoji, was formerly a mansion of Ashikaga Yoshimasa, built by him in 1483, after his abdication of the Shogun's dignity. Here he spent his last nine years in luxury, at practising many kinds of forms and ceremonies,—of tea-making, incense-burning, flower-arrangement, tray-landscape, and moreover, of garden-designing and curio-appreciating—each of which his patronage elevated almost to the rank of a fine art. After his demise, this mansion was converted into a Buddhistic temple by his will.

The apartments of the Hondo, or main temple, which are first shown to the visitor, have paper screens painted by two famous artists of the later Tokugawa period, Buson and Taigado. Many beautiful paintings by celebrated Japanese and Chinese artists, such as Kose Kanaoka, Sesshu, Soami, Gesshu, &c., each in a form of Kakemono, with a few lacquer and porcelain wares, and other precious art-works, adorn these rooms.

Next building to be shown is Togudo, which shows the characteristic style of architecture of Ashikaga period, remaining as Yoshimasa first built it. Here in an inner room stands an wooden image of the Shogun in priestly robes—he became a monk in 1485. That the image was carved by his own hand, as the tradition goes, is not certain, but the excellence of its workmanship is so striking that it was enlisted among National Treasures. There is also in the building a tiny tea room, the first in Japan built in accordance with the canon prescribing $4\frac{1}{2}$ mats as the proper size for such rooms. For the incense-burning ceremony, a special separate house called Roseitei was recently built after the rooms used by Yoshimasa for the purpose.

The spacious garden, designed by Soami, a favorite of Yoshimasa and expert of all fine arts and ceremonies, is a perfect model of the kind. It adds a charming effect derived from the high thickly pine-clad hills behind, lending it a really natural aspect. The curiously shaped heap of white sand in the garden is called Ginshadan, or the Silver Sand Platform. The smaller but taller one behind is called Kogetsudai, or the Mound Facing the Moon. The pond is called Kinkyochi, or the Brocade Mirror Pond, while the rill is called Sengetsusen, or the Moon Washing Fountain. Each islet, each stone, each bridge, each tree of any size has its name. A stroll through the garden by moonlight, especially in autumn evenings, is recommended.

Ginkaku, or the Silvery Pavilion, after which the popular name of the temple has been derived, stands near the pond, a two-storied summer house extremely graceful in style. Built by Yoshimasa in imitation of Kinkaku, or the Golden Pavilion, by one of his predecessors, Yoshimitsu, it is said, it never was really coated, with silver leaves, as he died before he had got so far.

A corridor leading from Hondo to the garden is, with its gate beautifully carved over the lintel, also of so graceful an architectural style, that the Kyoto Municipality takes the charge of its preservation, while the Government does the same with Togudo, and Ginkaku.

To those visitors who pay 30 sen as the special admission fee, a guide will be promptly furnished and tea served in ceremony by a priest. As souvenirs they can get from the temple many kinds of cards, illustrating the buildings, the garden, the image of Yoshimasa, and other relics of art.

THE Island of Hong-Kong lies off the Kwangtung Province, South China, about 20 miles east of the estuary of the Pearl River. It was ceded to Great Britain in perpetuity by the Treaty of Canton early in 1841, which was afterwards confirmed by the Treaty of Nanking on August 29th, 1842. About 10 miles long and from 2½ to 5 miles wide, the Island is little more than an irregular range of hills rising steeply from the sea to nearly 2,000 feet at the highest point.

Ocean liners arriving in Hong-Kong pass through Lyeemun Pass, with the eastern extremity of the Island on the left, and the mainland on the right. The capital of the Colony is Victoria, but is more usually known by the same name as the Island. It is a remarkable steep town, and slopes up from the waters edge at an angle of 23 deg. towards the three peaks of Wanchai, Victoria and High West, which tower well over a thousand feet above the summit of the town. The highest point is known as the Peak, and can be reached either by cable tramway or by road; it is 1,500 feet above sea level. From here, a wonderful view is obtained, and the scene at night, looking down upon the myriad lights, is reminiscent of fairyland and will never be forgotten; it is one of the most attractive features of a most fascinating Island.

Across from Victoria, on the mainland, is Kowloon. Kowloon is connected with the city of Victoria by excellent ferry services. The Star Ferry runs every few minutes from the wharf, within a stone's throw of the dock gates, the crossing occupying hardly more than ten minutes, and passengers disembark within two minute's walk of the centre of the city. All large vessels berth alongside the wharves at Kowloon.

Practical Note.

POPULATION: About 670,000 (British, about 8,000; Chinese, about 640,000; balance comprises some thirty different nationalities). When the island of Hong-Kong was ceded to the British Government in 1841 the total population was estimated at under 5,000.

CLIMATIC CONDITIONS: October-December, fine and cool; January-March, usually fine, with fogs in March; April-June, warm and wet; July-September, hot and humid.

LANDING AND BAGGAGE: Steamers berth at wharves; no charges. Hotel launches meet steamers.

CUSTOMS AND CURRENCY: Hong-Kong is a free port except for duties on liquor, tobacco and opium. Hong-Kong dollars, worth about 1s. 3½d., are legal tender.

LOCAL CONVEYANCES: Motor-cars, $3-$5 per hour; rickshaws, 40 cents per hour; motor-boats, about $5 per hour; seam launches, $6-$20 per hour.

BANKS: P. & O. Banking Corporation, Ltd., Hong-Kong & Shanghai B., Chartered B. of I., A. and C., Mercantile B. of India, International Bkg. Corp., etc.

CHIEF RAILWAY COMMUNICATIONS: Kowloon and Canton Railway.

LOCAL STEAMSHIP COMMUNICATIONS: Frequent service to Swatow, Amoy, Foochow, Formosa, Philippine Islands, Canton and Macao, and the Strait Settlements.

Hints to Visitors.—Of chief interest in Hong-Kong are the curio shops, mostly within easy walking distance from the centre of the town. There are excellent motor roads both on the Island and on the Mainland. An interesting trip for a passenger, who is passing through on a steamer, is the drive round the Island, staying at the Repulse Bay Hotel for lunch or tea, where there is also excellent sea-bathing. All places of interest, such as Statue Square, Government House, the University, Aberdeen Fishing Village, Deep Water Bay Golf Course, Repulse Bay, Stanley Bay, Tytam Reservoir, Quarry Bay, Happy Valley, Wanchai, etc., are visited on this trip. The hire of a motor-car for the trip, which takes approximately 1½ hours, is: small car $6.00, large $10.00, plus half rates for waiting. Cars are easily obtainable at various places in the town, and there is an adequate supply of them available at all times with reliable first-class drivers. A motor drive round the Island or to the Peak is essential to appreciate to the fullest extent the charm, beauty and superb scenery of the Colony.

Royal Hong-Kong Golf Club.—Consisting of two 18-hole courses and one 9-hole course at Fan Ling (on the mainland), one of which is reputedly the finest course in the Far East; a 9-hole course at Happy Valley, and another 9-hole course at Deep Water Bay. Visitors can obtain temporary membership to the above.

AMERICAN CONSULAR SERVICE

American Consulate General
Batavia, Java.

June 23, 1937.

Dear Dr. Mann:

I have recently returned from a long tour through South Sumatra and found that the Department of Economic Affairs had granted you an additional permit for

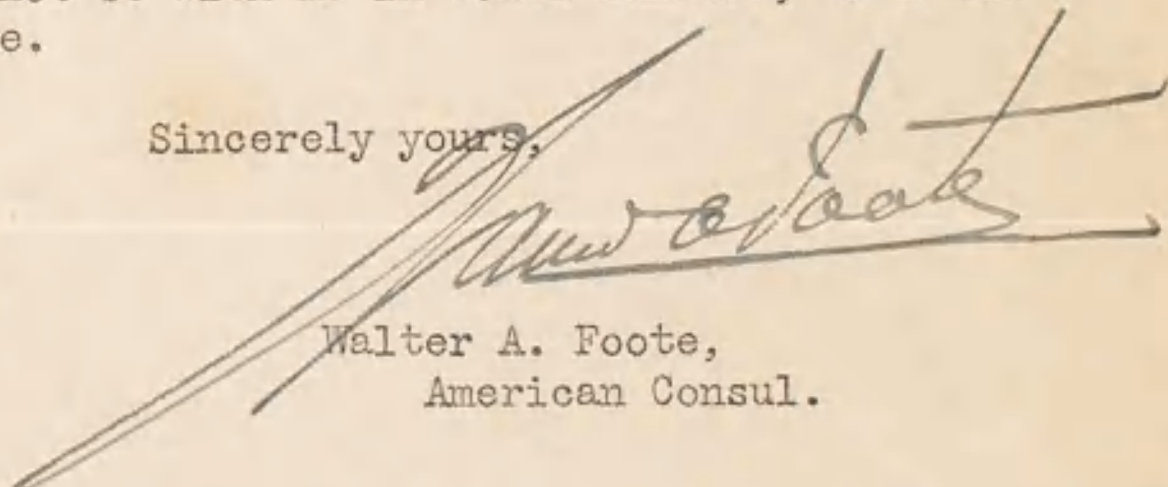

1 Orang utan,
500 Munia maja,
500 Munia punctulata,
500 Munia leucogastra,
500 Ploceus philippinus, and
20 of each of the birds not protected in Java and Sumatra.

The permit was addressed to you in care of Den Directeur van den Gemeentelijken Dierentuin te Pematang Siantar.

I hope that the permit has reached you by this time. I found it impossible to obtain a permit for two extra orang utans.

Sorry you could not be with me in South Sumatra, as I had a wonderful time there.

Sincerely yours,

Walter A. Foote,
American Consul.

"PLAYING NOAH"

BY William and Lucile Mann. When fine new buildings began to rise in the National Zoological Park last year and Dr. Mann, the Director, was wondering where he could procure rarer animals, birds, and reptiles for the cages, the National Geographic Society offered to sponsor jointly with the Smithsonian Institution an expedition to Netherlands Indies to get them.

In January Dr. Mann, with Mrs. Mann, and Dr. Maynard Owen Williams, of The Society's staff, sailed for Asia. Other members of the expedition included Roy Jennier and Malcolm Davis of the National Zoological Park. They took along animals common to the United States such as alligators, jaguars, opossums, racoons, black bears, and salamanders, to present or trade with Far Eastern zoos and potentates.

Reaching Sumatra, by way of Japan and China, they based at Pematang Siantar, where they collected in a miniature zoo tiger cubs, gibbons, orang-utans, and many other fascinating creatures. Dr. Williams photographed the animals and made splendid motion pictures showing the feeding and antics of "Noah's" pets.

Now Washington's Zoo ranks among the world's finest. Nearly 1,000 specimens were added to its collections by your Society's expedition.

With the blessings of the Smithsonian Institution and the National Geographic Society Dr. Mann did just that.

REGION OF THE NATION'S CAPITAL—Featuring the area of historical American sites and shrines around Washington, D. C.—in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, and Pennsylvania—a large illuminated map, 27½ x 32½ inches, will be issued in mid-year as a ten-color supplement to THE GEOGRAPHIC. Bringing Lasting Pleasure and Worth-While Information

CHINA'S "GREAT WALL OF SCULPTURE"—Hundreds of thousands of Buddhist images, carved nearly 15 centuries ago in cliffs of rock, look down from man-hewn caves in northern Shansi upon the drama of Chinese history. This colossal art wonder will be portrayed by THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC MAGAZINE in full-color paintings, 23 photographs, and a personal narrative by Mary Augusta Mullikin.

Hong Kong, Britain's Far-flung Outpost in China—An early issue of The Magazine will bring us a pictorial pageant of the life in this bustling seaport, gateway for the heavy trade that moves to and from Canton and other China ports.

Where Guernsey Cows Are Bred—On that friendly island in the English Channel from which Guernsey cows derive their name, cattle raising is not the only important occupation. How the islanders succeeded in building another major industry—hothouse farming—is told by Alfred S. Campbell in a story of his visit to Guernsey, illustrated with 39 natural-color and monochrome pictures.

Caribbean Cruise—Sailing in a "dream ship" built for two, Henry Howard found the realization of his careful plans for a West Indies cruise even more satisfying than he had hoped. Relating adventures of his voyage in the Alice, he also describes the enchanting scenery, historic places, and strange superstitions and customs in the West Indies of today. Among the islands photographically portrayed, Martinique and Guadeloupe are shown in rich, full color.

Not published for anyone's monetary profit, but issued solely as a means of spreading the fascinating information collected by the educational and altruistic National Geographic Society, The Magazine gives members the greatest possible return for the reasonable annual membership fee of $3 (Canada, $3.50; abroad, $4).

Austria, Belgium, in Prismatic Panorama—Sixteen pages of remarkable Kodachrome photographs and many others in black and white will accompany W. Robert Moore's account of his recent travels in Austria. Through another color-illustrated article, Douglas Chandler will take us to cities of Old World charm in Belgium, "a microcosm of Western Europe."

Map of Europe and Mediterranean Region—Now being prepared as a ten-color supplement to THE GEOGRAPHIC in April, this 39x34 1/4-inch wall map of timely importance will show new airlines, railways, boundary readjustments, and 9,000 up-to-date place names.

Monkey Folk—Continuing The Magazine's valuable series of natural-history articles, Dr. William M. Mann, Director of the National Zoological Park in Washington, D. C., has written an entertaining narrative of his wide experiences with monkey nature in cage and wild. His study will be illuminated with colorful portrait paintings of 50 monkeys.

New Mexico Next in State Series—In a coming presentation of the "Sunshine" State, Frederick Simpich calls New Mexico "an easy place to be happy in." Through his comprehensive story, animated by personal interviews with pioneers, and by photographs which reflect the lavish coloration of the State, we see New Mexico at work and play; we visit its cities, ranches, missions, Indian villages, the majestic Carlsbad Caverns, and many other fascinating spots. Our pleasure-filled journey ends at Santa Fe, sunny playground of the Southwest.

Dr. and Mrs. William M. Mann,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Dr. and Mrs. Mann:

Several years ago Miss Mary C. Burr left a bequest to the National Geographic Society as a memorial to her father, Franklyn L. Burr, with the request that the interest of the fund be used to make Franklyn L. Burr prize awards to outstanding leaders of National Geographic Society expeditions.

The first awards from this fund were made in 1936 to Captain A. W. Stevens and Captain Orvil A. Anderson, leader and pilot, respectively, of the National Geographic Society-U.S. Army Air Corps Stratosphere Expedition.

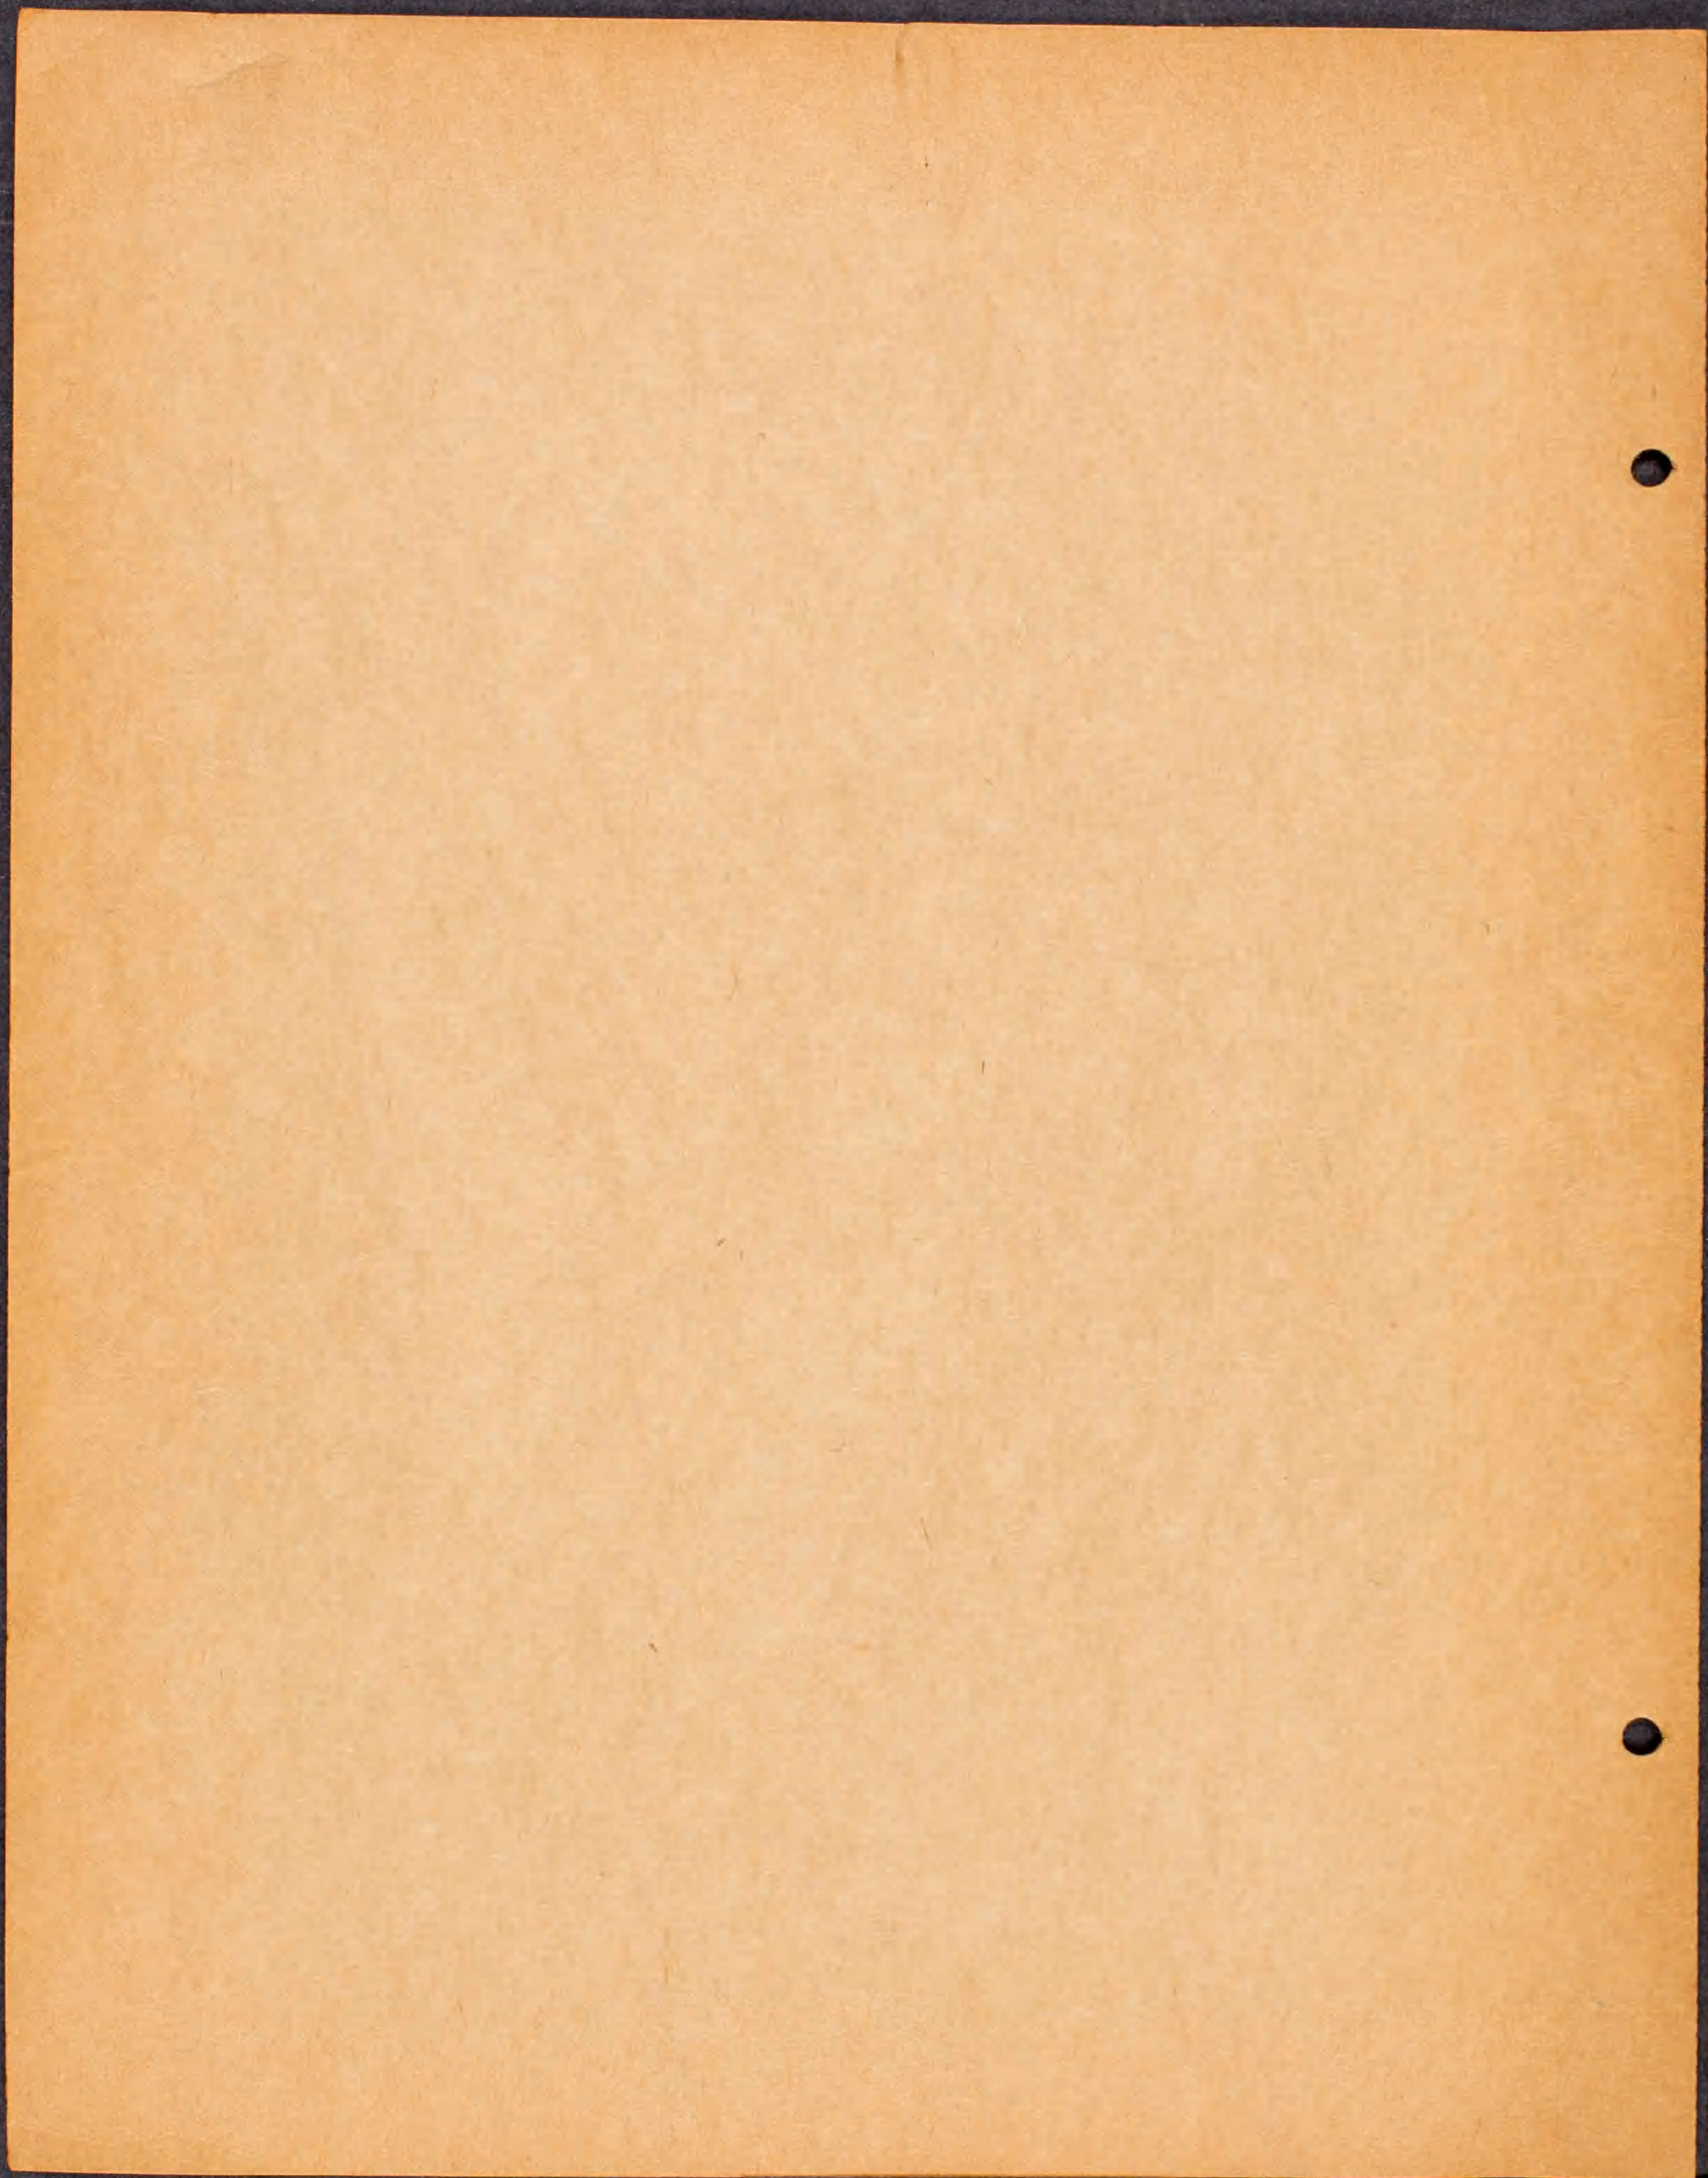

I have much pleasure in advising you that the Board of Trustees of the National Geographic Society at its meeting yesterday, on the recommendation of the Committee on Research, Lyman J. Briggs, Chairman, and Alexander Wetmore, Vice Chairman, unanimously voted a Franklyn L. Burr Prize of One Thousand Dollars to you, in recognition of the excellent results you achieved on your biological expedition for the National Geographic Society in 1937. I enclose remittance from the Treasurer of The Society, Robert V. Fleming, for this amount.

With kindest regards and congratulations to you both, in which Dr. La Gorce and your many friends here joyfully join, I am

Yours sincerely,

Gilbert Grosvenor
